

Showing Respect: A Report on the First Landowner Appreciation Cleanup Day

Landowner Appreciation Cleanup Day

Activities such as snowmobiling, ATV riding, hunting, berry picking, hiking, and cross country skiing have all been enjoyed on private land in Maine for many years. This tradition, unique to Maine, is in danger of disappearing because of land abuse by a few people who show a serious lack of respect for open land access.

Within the last four years alone, at least 425 landowners across the state have requested more than 16,600 “Access by Permission Only” signs from the Maine Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife. Many other landowners have gone the route of posting their land as “No Trespassing.”

The Landowners Relations Program is a joint program operated by the Maine Department of Conservation (MDOC) and the Department of Inland Fisheries & Wildlife (DIF&W) designed to help the relationship between private landowners and recreation groups. The LOR program director is responsible for coordinating efforts with the state’s natural resource agencies, other governmental agencies, landowners, and other interested groups, to ensure that the tradition of appropriate public use of public and private lands continues.

The LOR director works closely with the Governor’s Landowner and Sportsman Relations Advisory Committee. The program works with small and large landowners and various recreational users to prevent the improper use of private and public property, receive and resolve complaints, diminish conflicts, undertake outreach and assistance to landowners who permit public recreational access on their property. Delivery of services is assisted at the grassroots level through recreational clubs and organizations, such as the Maine Snowmobile Association, ATV Maine, Sportsman’s Alliance of Maine, Maine Professional Guides Association, and sportsmen’s clubs.

The Advisory Committee has wrestled with the issue of trash dumping for years. One of the major complaints from landowners is illegal dumping, and there is strong concern that this has led and will continue to lead to further land closures.

To honor the tradition of open access on private land, the Maine Landowner Relations Program organized and coordinated a Landowner Appreciation Cleanup Day on Sept. 25, 2010 with volunteers from local ATV and snowmobile clubs, land trust organizations and other groups collecting trash on designated private and public land where trash sites had been reported. This first cleanup day focused on Cumberland, Oxford, Kennebec, York, and Penobscot counties because of known dumping sites in those counties. The ultimate goal is to develop this event into an annual one in all of Maine’s 16 counties.

Early in 2010, a planning subcommittee was formed and the LOR program director wrote and received a $4,000 grant from the Maine Outdoor Heritage Fund to assist with expenses for the cleanup day.

The planning committee included representation from MDOC, DIF&W, State Planning Office, The Nature Conservancy, Central Maine Power Co., and Small Woodland Owners Association of Maine (SWOAM).

The sub-committee members implemented a work plan to do regional cleanups as a pilot project for this first year. They decided to limit the outreach to five or six counties where some sites and problems already were identified. The LOR director did extensive outreach through letters, emails and phone calls to various landowners, including to SWOAM, the Maine Farm Bureau, and the Maine Forest Products Council, which notified their members.

The first Cleanup Day was an unqualified success, with a total of 56 sites in 12 towns improved through the hard work of 152 people who contributed more than 616 hours of their time. A whopping 46 tons of garbage and discarded items, including more than 16 tons of tires, were accumulated for disposal.

Participants included club members, land trust members, and Boy Scouts, with even the town of Hampden taking part on a municipal level to clean up an old industrial site. The crews found items usually found at obscure dump sites – mattresses, lots of trash, old clothing and household junk. Some of the more unusual items hauled away were: an old swimming pool with a heater and sand filter; old toilets; bait bags, netting and marine debris; and a freezer full of old food.

Some of the volunteer groups made the effort into a social event, rewarding themselves with picnic barbeques. In Limington, the barbeque was done by the local ATV club; in Standish, the local Kiwanis Club hosted the outdoor feed; and in Hampden, the town sponsored the barbeque.

The cleanup effort received good media coverage, with articles appearing in newspapers and online as well as TV reports.

Response from both participants and landowners to the event was very positive, so much so that two landowners actually decided to join their local ATV clubs because they were so impressed by what the clubs had done by taking the initiative to clean up someone else's land. The Town of Limington also posted new signs warning of stiff penalties for violators for dumping at the newly cleaned sites.

Because of the success of this Landowner Appreciation Cleanup Day, we plan to make it an annual event, contingent on grant money. The next Cleanup Day will be held this spring, and it is anticipated that more landowners and organizations will take part.

Bob,
Thank you very much for the list of contact people to thank for their efforts in the Landowner Clean-up Day activities. Jerry Major called me after he received his thank you letter to thank us for allowing them to travel over CTF land. Also, thank you very much for all of your efforts in planning, organizing, and following through to make this clean-up so successful.
Chadbourn Tree Farms really appreciates this effort which has taken so much time and energy to ensure its success. Again, Thank you.

Extremely well done Bob... Nice job!

I had a meeting yesterday with parties involved with Cobscook Trails (have you ever seen that trail guide? very cool...) and shared some of your success. I think next cleanup day, we could organize a hub in this area. There seems to be interest... Regardless, all the land managers around the table were very impressed with this effort. You should be very proud!
